

Students Figure Angles, Lay Out Playground

Eighth grade students at Anza Elementary School recently drew up the plans which were used for laying out the game and markers on the playground area.

As part of their math work, students in Andrew Kovach's class measured a newly-installed 400-square-foot blacktop area. Student leaders were Jon Payne, Crawford Marshall, and Marshall Hoalst.

Then, they figured out what lines would have to be painted on it for students to play the various games involved and drew up plans which the schools' Operations Department was able to use in painting lines for the area.

School to Open 13 Classrooms Here Monday

Opening of 13 new classroom additions next Monday will eliminate double sessions at Meadow Park and Flavian Elementary Schools, according to school officials.

The additions include nine new classrooms at Meadow Park (including the music room which will be used temporarily as a regular classroom) and four classrooms at Flavian.

Other current construction work includes construction of Victor Elementary School, Victor and Spencer, and site work on the West High School.

Plans for Hickory Elementary School, 230th and Hickory, are currently being checked by the state, with bids to be let shortly after their approval.

Compact Car Spawned New Road Perils

The rising number of compact cars has spawned a new driving problem, but a simple mechanical adjustment can effectively cure it for many motorists who drive newer cars, according to Bradford M. Crittenden, California Highway Patrol Commissioner.

The problem—increased vulnerability to the danger of the left-hand blind spot. The cure—a slight adjustment of the rear-view mirrors.

"Many drivers have found that compact cars are more easily and more frequently 'lost' in the left-side blind spot," the commissioner pointed out.

THE VEHICLE'S rear-view mirrors can be so arranged to eliminate this blind spot in many cars, he said.

"The inside mirror should be positioned so that it gives a view which includes, or nearly includes, the tip of the left rear fender. The left-side mirror should then be adjusted so that the left rear fender is just within your range of vision. Slight variations probably will be necessary with different automobiles.

"The overlap in the mirrors will effectively cancel out the blind spot, and a car coming up from the rear—even the tiniest compact—which moves out to pass you will always be visible in one of the two mirrors," the commissioner said.

"In the interest of safety, of course, it is still wise to double check the situation at the left by glancing over your shoulder if you are about to pull out to pass a car," he said.
